teenage mum and her baby Helping young people overcome life's toughest barriers

Parenthood isn't something many teenagers have to think about, but for those that do, there is help and support available. We work with young parents aged 13 to 25, supporting them in balancing parenthood with their own needs, and helping them create better chances for their children.

We encourage self-expression and help young people with difficult challenges. We encourage self-expression and help young people with difficult challenges.

HOUSING CRISIS: Not enough homes and prices too high

As pressure to tackle the crisis grows, a number of views are being offered on how the problem should be

Even in rich countries, low-income families in inadequate housing have higher levels of unemployment and their children are more likely to do poorly in school and quit sooner than other students

PM proposes to see

Groups from the housing industry along with charities and planners are gathering in Westminster on Tuesday to demand an end to the shortage in new homes.

It is thought that 240,000 new homes are needed every year, but last year only 120,000 were built.

The shortage has in the past been described by the governor of the Bank of England, Mark Carney, as the "biggest risk" to the UK

As pressure to tackle London's housing crisis grows, a number of controversial views are being offered on how the problem should be addressed.

"House prices soar." "Fears of a housing bubble." "First-time buyers priced-out." These are familiar headlines to Londoners. Each has appeared in the press in the past month, but similar headlines have become all-too recognisable over the past couple of years.

We support people in urgent need, helping them off the streets and into accommodation. We manage referral systems such as the national StreetLink line and Street Concern so that members of the public can tell us if they are concerned about someone sleeping rough, and we can connect those people to local services. Of course, this emergency work is funded by the government.

Heavenly figures claim world peace is coming

Violence escalated and the country descended into civil war as rebel brigades formed to battle against the government for control of cities, towns and the countryside. Fighting reached the capital Damascus and second city of Aleppo in 2012. By June 2013, the UN said 90,000 people had been killed in the conflict. The rise of the jihadist groups, including Islamic State, has added a new dimension to the conflict.
