

FamilyLife

Singleness is not a problem to be solved – it's a season or calling that deserves respect and celebration. Some people are single by choice, others due to more hurtful or grief-stricken experiences. Each person's journey is unique, and it is important to listen and be led by the experience of the individual.

Singleness is a gift from God to be leaned into and not rushed – a unique opportunity to be shaped, refined and rooted in intimacy with God. Regardless of relationship status, we were made for community, so allow your community to surround each person in love.

Links to further support and resources:

Single but Not Lonely: Living Well While Unmarried | Desiring God

An article that offers a positive, practical view of singleness, encouraging people to steward their single years well.

The gift of singleness – The Lee Abbey Movement Offers an encouraging biblical perspective of singleness and a challenge as to where we find our identity.

singlefriendlychurch.com Can equip corps to support single people.

SINGLENES